Driving efficiency and user experience in a busy chain of coffee and juice bars

Client
Juice Jar

Industry
Food & Technology

What we did

Software Development

The Client

Juice Jar is a chain of local coffee and juice bars with branches across the UK with plans to open several more in the coming months.  With a growing and frequently change staff team a challenge across their branches was managing the multiple sources orders were coming from: phone, in-store, Deliveroo, Uber Eats etc and ensuring staff were adequately trained to manage them all.

The Project

We worked with the team to build an internal system that would consolidate the orders into one dashboard to allow the staff in store to manage orders and the kitchen staff to process efficiently.  With plans to scale quickly the business new the ordering process had to be manageable to allow staff to train quickly and provide a consistency of service across stores and customers regardless of their method of ordering.  A great example of a business using technology to facilitate growth and manage growing pains, exactly the type of project and team with love partnering with.

The Lir Academy is Ireland's National Academy of Dramatic Art at Trinity College Dublin offering a range of postgraduate, undergraduate and short courses in theatre related subjects. The previous website was dated and clunky, it also had no functionality for payments or student applications.

The Solution

We partnered with the college to redesign their site and close a gap in the student application process. With their students in mind, we build from the ground up, a custom application website and back-end which also allows online payments, payment with instalments, booking accommodation, sales reporting and a wide range of custom requirements. Since launch early 2020, we have continued to develop the website for The Lir, building new features on an almost monthly basis.

A fresh new concept for mobile food ordering for rural communities

The Client

DishDashDine is a mobile ordering startup in the UK and Ireland that aims to solve a gap in the food delivery market for rural communities. Its purpose is to provide an Uber Eats/Deliveroo experience for a fraction of the cost for smaller restaurants and suppliers in rural areas.

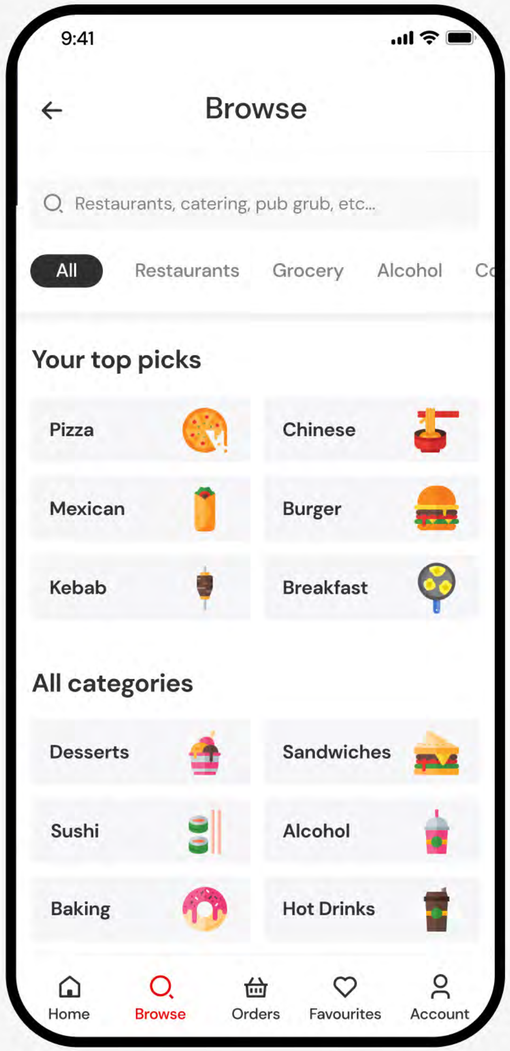

The Project

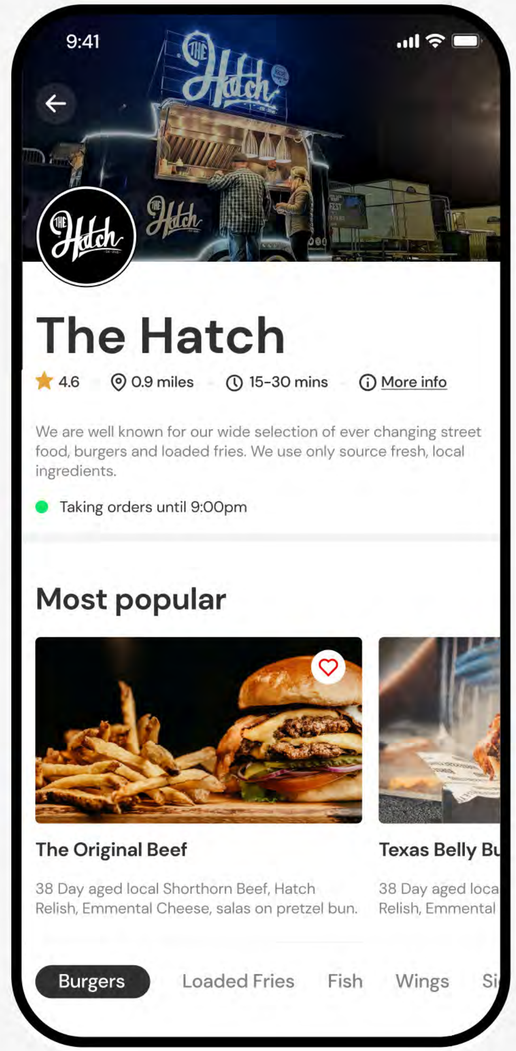

Dish Dash Dine approached Myth with big ambitions to take on Uber, Just Eat and Deliveroo with a concept that they had already tested and proven. We partnered with the startup to taking their no-code demo to design and develop a completely new mobile app from the ground up, with a key focus on the consumer user experience and the restaurant owner.

MPS Data are specialists in developing innovative forms of data based sporting analysis, to provide simple and practical bespoke solutions for football clubs.

The Project

We were tasked to develop multiple new integrations into the software and provide consultancy for future development. New functionality included a new video platform that would allow football clubs to scout players and review relevant video clips of that player and a new watcher platform to allow their game watchers to enter and control data input.
